Vikings To Face Mancelona Here Tomorrow Afternoon

Rayders Pile Up 45-0 Tally

The Grayling High School Vikings will be fighting to break into the victory column tomorrow afternoon at the City Park Field when they take on the Mancelona Ironmen in the third game of the 1949 grid season.

The Vikings took a 45 to 0 pasting at Charlevoix last week as the powerful Rayders poured 2 touchdowns over in the first period, added another in the second and three more in the final quarter.

Coach Bruch Smith of Grayling used 19 men in the struggle. Five sophomores and three freshmen got a taste of football under fire for the first time as Coach Smith took the opportunity of giving his full squad the benefit of real game experience. Charlevoix used their first eleven men until the final minutes of the game.

Center Warren Hatfield, a freshman and John Goss, a junior end, entered this first scholastic football game along with Jerry Baker, sophomore halfback, Earl Jenson, sophomore guard. Skip Hanson, sophomore end, Jack Kolka, sophomore back and Rex Hunter, sophomore tackle. Duane Worden, freshman halfback, Bruce LaChappelle, freshmen tackle both broke into the lineup for the first time this season also and played real football for first year men.

Old standbys from last year who played were Bill Worden, junior full back, Jack Trudeau, senior quarterback, Bob Rasmussen, senior hafback, Ernie Miller, senior and Vic Papendick, senior guard.

Nineteen out of 24 boys that made the trip to Charlevoix played in the game. Max Niederer, fleet left halfback was left home ill which did not help the Vikings cause.

Coach Smith is working his charges on fundamentals this week and with two games under their belts are conceded a better than even chance of emerging the victors from this weeks fray.

Although the dismal defeat at the hands of the Rayders was a severe conference loss, many first and second year squad members received valuable experience which will pay off the rest of this season and for a couple of seasons to come. The Vikings are plagued by inexperience in several key positions, mainly center, tackles and ends. The freshmen and sophomores breaking into the lineup in these and other positions will go a long way in building up power for the rest of the 1949 games and for the coming years.

Archery Season Opens Saturday

The largest bow hunting army in history will kick the lid off the deer season October 1.

With more liberalized hunting regulations and more bow hunting converts, the conservation department expects about 12,000 or nearly 25 per cent more archers than last year. On the basis of 1948 report cards returned. the department estimates 9,875 bow hunters bagged 583 deer.

Archers are becoming more skillful for in 1947 only one in 20 got a deer, last year one in 17, and as high as one out of every 15 hunters is expected to bring home venison this season.

Last year three--fourths of the archers limited their stalking range to a half-dozen counties. With the higher hunter concentration in Roscommon, Allegan, Crawford, Oscoda, Iosco and Montmorency Counties, 85 per cent of the deer were harvested in these locations.

Male deer may be taken in any county from October 1-November 5. Liberalized regulations this year provide for taking a deer of either sex in this period in Alcona, Antrim, Alger, Baraga, Benzie, Charlevoix, Crawford. Delta, Gogebic Grand Traverse, Iosco, Iron, Lake, Leelanau, Luce, Mackinac, Manistee, Mason, Montmorency, Ontonagon, Oscoda, Roscommon, Schoolcraft. Wexford, Drummond Island in Chippewa County, and in that part of the state lying south of the north line of Townline 16, except Allegan County. Special bow season in Allegan County on deer of either sex runs from October 1 to December 15.

Archers who fail to get their deer in the bow and arrow season are eligible to purchase a gun license to hunt in the general season, November 15-30. Resident bow and arrow and gun licenses are $3.50 each. Non-residents pay $35 for a gun license and $10 for the bow license.

Retailing Round Table Course Plan Big Sales Meeting

The series of retail round table meetings which have now run for three consecutive Monday evenings at the Grayling High School under the sponsorship of the Grayling Chamber of Commerce and headed by Howard R. Sommers, of the field division of Central Michigan College, are planning a big salesmanship meeting next Monday evening in the assembly room at the school.

All sales persons of all Grayling stores are especially invited to attend along with gas station operators who Mr. Sommers termed the "good will ambassadors of any town." A movie depicting correct selling methods along with many other suggestions as to how to boost sales, make the customer feel at home, and to give real service to the customer will be discussed.

There is no charge for this series of round table discussions as the program is jointly sponsored by the federal and state governments through their adult education programs and the local sponsoring organization. The Grayling Chamber brought the series here in an effort to aid the retail merchant of Grayling in running his business more efficiently and hence more profitably.

This past Monday evening correct buying practices were quite fully discussed at the round table which brought out nearly 20 people. Mr. Sommers pointed out that Roscommon and West Branch where the course is currently being held also was turning out a much larger group of retailers who were enthusiastic about the program.

The round table discussions enable the local merchant to find ways and means of meeting competition of all types. It aids him in knowing what to buy, when to buy it, how to display it properly and above all how to sell it. Rural stores have taken the brunt of the decline in business during the past year. Mr. Sommers said, and added that it was not at all necessary that they do.

Correct management of stores and stocks plus good displaying and selling can put any stores sales back up where they were in 1948, he said. A check of the downtown streets Monday evening showed more stores with their window lights out than on, Mr. Sommers said, in pointing out a local example of poor displaying.

C. A. P. NEWS

Last week was devoted to getting settled in our new building at the air port. The attendance was good and to make it better we had three of our girl cadets attending our meeting.

We would like to see more of the members attending these meetings as we have an excellent instructor now who is also our operation officer, Robert Nickols from Waters. Lieut. Nickols is also the C. A. A. flight examiner in this district. So you can be sure that his lectures are interesting.

We didn't do so bad on our dance, September 17, although we didn't make anything, all had a good time, and we are sure the next one we have will be a success.

How about it members, last week we had an attendance of 20. Let's beat that this week. As you have probably heard the highest cadet to pass the exams at the end of the course will be given enough dual time to solo an airplane. So if you want to learn to fly a plane how about turning out for the meetings which are every Wednesday night from 8:00 to 10:00 P. M.

We would like to also invite any body else who is interested in Civil Air Patrol to come out to our meetings and listen in. We have the building next to the fire hall now and lots of furniture for our class rooms. We hope to have our navagational trainer working as soon as we can obtain batteries for it. So if anybody feels like donating a six volt battery to the squadron for our trainer for which we need four of them, they can either contact Lt. Johnson of Lt. Selesky.

Things Look Better

Business Week, in one of its recent issues said, "The six-month slide in business has ended. . . . It's evident that a vigorous upward movement is underway.

"The real question becomes: Is business going to climb back the upward slanting plateau of full employment it occupied from mid 1946 until the end of 1948? Or are we seeing nothing more than a brief rally, after which business activity will again begin to sag?

"Whether or not it's just a rally or a real recovery, the upturn has now gained so much momentum that it's hard to see how it can fail to carry through most of the remaining months of 1949."

The mazagine goes on to point out that the year-end will be a crucial period. At that time, according to the forecasts, exports will drop, automobile sales—which have beeen a very important factor in keeping business and employment in many fields at high levels — will probably slacken to some degree, and spending by industry on new plants will be down. The hope is that the low in spending in these directions will be made up by an increase in others.

At any rate, Business Week cites a number of signs which indicate that business is now pulling out of the spring slump. Electric power output, always one of the best business barometers has gained. So have rail shipments of manufactured articles. Textiles, which were deep in the doldrums a while back, show new life. And things seem to be looking up in the appliance industries.

Consumer income, during the first half of this year, was well ahead of last. And so was consumer spending. In that first half, retail sales were two per cent under the same period last year—but, Business Week says, this was "only because of price drops. Far from being frightened into retrenchment, consumers actually spent a larger proportion of their incomes than in the last half of 1948."

New One Man Grand Jury Law

Editor's Note: This is the fourth in a series of articles on laws which were passed at the 1949 session of the Michigan Legislature. They affect you and every resident of Michigan. The entire series is prepared as a public service of the State Bar of Michigan under the direction of Russell A. Soarl, Lansing, Chairman of the State Bar Committee on Legislation and Law Reform. The articles are objective in nature and do not attempt to comment on the relative worth of the legislative enactments, but rather to present the most important facts and alert you to the changes these alws represent as they become effective on September 23, 1949.

While the 1949 Michigan Legislature passed several acts which carried criminal penalties for their violation, the act which attracted most widespread attention in respect to law enforcement was not an act defining a crime or imposing penalties, but rather, an act amending the law governing the operation of one-man grand juries.

While the one-man grand jury law was originally enacted in 1917 and from time to time one-man grand juries convened, the law did not receive widespread public attention until the holding of the Ferguson grand jury in Wayne County some ten years ago. Since then various other grand juries have been in the public spotlight, particularly those which were held in Macomb and Ingham Counties.

These became the subject of considerable dispute, not only among members of the bar, but also among the general public. Their accomplishments in bringing offenders, particularly those in high office, to trial were pointed to as a notable accomplishment on one hand by defenders of the system of one-man grand juries, while critics claimed abuses to witnesses and the use of "third degree" tactics. It is not the present purpose to evaluate or weigh those accomplishments or criticisms, but, instead, to report the changes made by the last legislature in the law under which the one-man grand jury system existed.

Under the new law, instead of one circuit judge or justice of the peace conducting a grand jury, it will be conducted by three circuit judges. All testimony must be taken before the three judges, either in the court room or in some convenient public building, and witnesses subpoenaed for it are entitled to have their testimony taken without delay. This was done with the idea of eliminating any possibility of the use of methods which, whether used or not, have produced criticism in the past of grand jury tactics.

Another change of considerable moment is the removal of the provision authorizing the judge to grant a witness immunity. Under this provision witnesses who testified concerning a crime before the grand juror could not be prosecuted for their part in the commission of such a crime. Those who were opposed to this provision in the bill contended that the right to grant immunity was the main weapon which the grand juror could use to obtain evidence of the commission of a crime, and that the removal of this provision for all practical purposes repealed the grand jury law by so greatly weakening it that it could not be effective. On the other hand, the critics of this provision contended that there was no justification for allowing one offender, perhaps the worst, because he saw fit to testify before the grand juror, to entirely escape punishment for his part in the commission of the crime. Recent examples of poor memory or even outright refusal of such persons to testify upon prosecutions after being granted immunity were pointed to effectively, and the legislature, by a narrow margin, adopted the change.

Changes were also made in the provisions which authorized the court to hold witnesses guilty of contempt. Previously the judge could jail witnesses for a period of sixty days who refused to answer material questions. Now such witnesses must first be accorded a public hearing in an open court. The new law placed further limitations upon this power of the court by declaring that communication between reporters and their informants, attorneys and clients, physicians and patients, and clergymen and members of their respective congregations, were privileged and confidential. Accordingly, the court will no longer be permitted to insist that the witness testify regarding the subject matter of such communications. The extent of such privilege had previously been the subject of litigation. Now the legislature has specifically written it into law.

The act also disqualifies special grand jury prosecutors from reappointment in that position for a period of three years. It further disqualifies both the judge and prosecutor of grand juries, which continue in existence more than sixty days, from election or appointment for another office for a two-year period. This provision was inserted to prevent the use of a grand jury office with its resulting publicity as a stepping stone to another political office. Limitation is also placed upon salaries paid to such prosecutors.

(The next article in the series will deal with veterans legislation such as the Michigan Veterans Trust Fund, Veterans Bonus Act, etc.)

Michigan Mirror

No special session of the state legislature will be called by Governor G. Mennen Williams this fall.

Such is the interpretation which the "Michigan Mirror" deduces from an exchange of letters between the governor and State Treasurer D. Hale Brake, Auditor General Murl K. Aten and Controller Robert F. Steadman over a 1950 deficit.

An additional observation might be made: The problem of state finances, caused directly by diversion of 78 per cent of sales tax revenues to public schools and cities and townships, will await the 1950 session of the state legislature.

Here is the record, and you can judge for yourself.

Last May the governor intimated he would call legislators into special session to consider new taxes. Legislators had declined to adopt a levy on corporation profits. A proposed increase in the state gasoline tax had been pigeon-holed in committee. Controller Steadman, who heads the department of administration, said that legislative appropriations were approximately $50,000,000 higher than the state's anticipated tax revenues.

The legislature's attitude, as represented by G. O. P. leaders, was this: Wait and see. Many Michigan taxpayers are not convinced new taxes are necessary.

To bring the matter to a head, Governor Williams recently sent a letter to the state treasurer, auditor general and controller. He asked for advice: What are you going to do in 1950 "when" the deficit develops?

The controller replied that the would certify whether disbursements were proper in the light of legislative appropriations. The auditor general said he would issue warrants only if cash was on hand. The state treasurer's reply was along these lines: "If" a deficit develops, the treasurer was willing to delay payment of some bills ,to utilize certain funds other than trust funds and to use even earmarked funds temporarily. He said it might be possible to reduce liquor inventory of the state liquor control commission—a step taken by Governor Frank Murphy in 1938 when a similar deficit existed.

Brake suggested that the governor try "economy," rather than more state spending, and thus help any treasury deficit.

It is the contention of Controller Steadman that the treasury deficit will rapidly develop in March, 1950. During February and March the state must divert substantial sums of sales tax revenues to schools, cities and townships. These payments are expected to drain the general fund of its remaining cash.

Thus, history will repeat itself. Eleven years ago the late Frank Murphy was governor. The 1937 session of the legislature had left the state budget $18 million in the red. By the end of the first fiscal year (June 30, 1937-38) the actual deficit was $9,000,000—about half of what had been anticipated.

The state had met all payrolls on time. The treasurer had merely borrowed from other funds. Unemployment was high in 1938, due to a recession. Governor Murphy called the legislature into special session to appropriate more money for welfare aid. A sum of $10,000,000 was authorized—in the face of an existing deficit. No new taxes were levied.

Frank Fitzgerald campaigned for economy in state government. He assailed a $9,420,000 increase in the state payroll during the Murphy administration. The CIO sit-down strike had evoked strong public resentment. Fitzgerald capitalized on this, too. Murphy lost the election and later was sent by President Roosevelt to the Philippines and then to the United States Supreme Court.

If state government could meet payrolls in 1938 with red ink on its books, it seems logical to us that it can do so in 1950.

Why then all this letter writing in September, 1949?

President Truman said he opened the 1950 political campaign with his Labor Day speeches at Philadelphia and DesMoines. The same might be said about Governor Williams' letters.

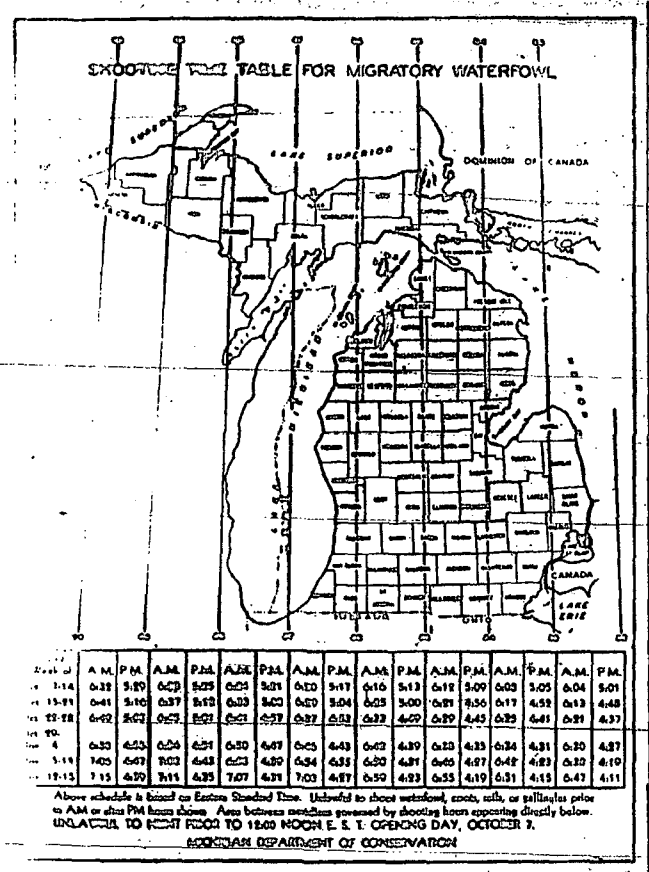

The Michigan gubernatorial campaign is already under way.

Who is to blame for the big, bad deficit at Lansing?

Not the voters who want 78 percent of state sales tax for schools, cities and townships. No, no! The "villain" will be—take your choice (1) a Republican legislature which declines to tax corporation profits; (2) a Democratic governor who insists on more state aid for everyone, especially for members of the CIO.

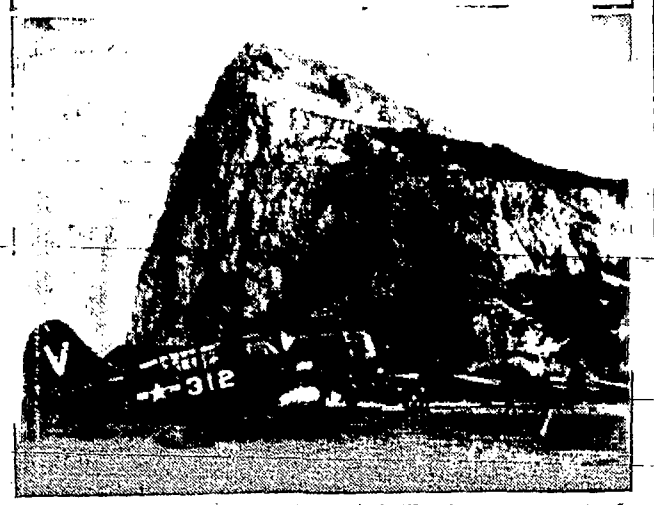

The game of chess originated more than 5,000 years ago in Hindustan.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

A Big Boost For Smitty!

Stepped into Smith's Department Store the other noon and saw the strangest thing. "Sis" Davis was coming up the stairs from the basement with a bundle of wash.

"Is Smitty taking in washing these days?" I asked. "Not quite," she says. "He's just put in a new automatic washing machine, so the girls who work here can get their laundry done while they're eating lunch. Means more time to relax at night and on weekends."

I thought what a swell boss Smitty must be. Human relations between the boss and employees have certainly taken a big step forward during my lifetime.

From where I sit, people seem to be doing a better job of seeing our neighbor's viewpoint these days. Though his ideas and tastes may not be ours, we can understand his preference for a certain breakfast cereal, a favorite movie star, or for a temperate glass of beer or ale. That's the way it should be in a free country.

TALL TIMBER TALES

BY PETE

Several people have been asking about the Indian girl and the white papoose. mentioned in an earlier column, and reminding me that I promised there would be more later. I do appreciate their interest, and I'll admit I've been stalling a little during the summer months, hoping to "get by" until vacations were over, evenings a little longer, and I could get into a little continuity on some of the longer stories that were hard to tell in a 300 word column. Such a story is "Nika" and the white papoose she inherited and raised as her own. In edging up to that story and others like, "Old Tillie and Her Whelps," "The Gang That Robbed a Big Logging Concern right down to the Skids," and "Peenyeek,' the boy named after a potato, I would like to go back to thestory of Clay Woods, a timber cruiser and surveyor for whom it was my good fortune to 'carry chain' into the then 'backward' parts of the upper AuSable county. Clay's people had been big operators on the Lake Huron coast in what Clay called 'the early days and he knew the country upside down and backwards. Just whether Clay was of the firm Pack & Woods of AuSable or not, I'm not certain. Big names didn't register with me at fourteen, but Clay himself did. He was about forty, long and lank, soft-spoken and meticulous about his work and knew how to hand out responsibility to a boy and make him feel like a man. I wish every boy in the country today could have had the opportunity to spend a summer or two in the woods with a man like Clay. Nights beside a little fire in the big woods, with Clay telling stories, now and then a wolf howling in the distance, coyotes whimpering close by. the whisper of owls's wings in the darkness overhead. 'Big stuff' for any boy.

"Nika should a been an Injun Princess, or the daughter of a great Chief," I can still hear Clay chuckle, as he leaned back against a tree after supper and got out his pipe, "but she wa'nt ne'er one. Even her name, Nika, meant "not much" or "not good." It seems her parents had figured on her being a boy. Anyhow, she'd always had bad luck. Her folks died of a smallpox epidemic the first year they were on the reservation and she went back to Big Bear swamp to live with her granddad, old Crazy Sho-be-gun. The Government finally caught up with her and sent her to school a couple of years at Mackinac, on the money her folks had coming for land and then she had to up and marry one of old Tillie's Whelps, a flashy feller name of Joe Mukk, up round Ossineke."

Short Story

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

TRACY clawed his way up over the slippery ledge, threw his skis and poles on the ground and sat down panting. Generva laughed merrily.

"That's what city life does to you," she chided. "See? You can't take it any more."

"For a fact I can't," he grinned. "Phew! What a climb! Skis are no good up here. If we're going to the top we'll have to hobnail it up."

"We can quit and go down," she said. Her voice held the barest hint of a taunt. She hated herself for it.

"Quit nothing! Just because I've been away for two years you needn't think you can stump me." Tracy's eyes flicked over the girl's slim, wiry figure. "Boy, you always could take it," he admired. "Ever since we were kids I've had to hump to keep up with you."

The reference to their childhood escapades brought on a flood of regrets.

Two years ago he had left her with a brotherly clap on the back and a firm handclasp. She had almost hated him. He had gone down to the city to become an architect. Then he'd written about Jessica. She was a singer in a night club. He had fallen madly in love with her. His letters had been full of their romance.

Generva had wanted to tell him to stop writing his everlasting prattle about a silly night club singer. Didn't he know that every word was a knife thrust in her heart?

"You know," he said suddenly, "you're growing more lovely every year, Gen. Some day soon a man's coming along and—"

She laughed out loud and scrambled to her feet. "Come on, City Man, we've got to get going if we want to make the top and get back."

Tracy grinned and yanked himself up the first steep ascent. Before he had gone 10 feet he realized that it was a foolhardy business. Without ice picks and ropes climbing was hazardous.

He started ahead again and then stopped. Above him, maybe 30 feet away, he could make out the blurred form of Generva.

The blurred outline stopped. He listened for her reply, but if she called the wind drowned it. For an instant her hobnailed boots were clawing against the ice. Then she came coasting down the incline, reaching frantically for bushes that slid through her hands. Tracy made a lunge. His hand caught at her ski jacket as she whipped past, held, felt it slip through his fingers.

A strangled cry escaped his lips. Horror-stricken, he watched her reach the ledge and flip over its edge, disappear. In a moment he was back on the flat ground looking over the odge, not daring to hope.

Fifty feet below he made out a green patch, like a wisp of cloth caught in the gnarled branches of a hardwood shrub.

IT SEEMED like hours before he found footing against a rock 10 feet from where Generva clung to the hardwood shrub. Directly beneath her was a 200-foot chasm.

Tracy slipped the handle of one pole through the wheel of the other, tightened the strap on his wrist and cast out across the ice. At his second attempt Generva grasped the clim bamboo.

"Take it easy," he called. "You'll have to swing down like a pendulum, then slowly upward."

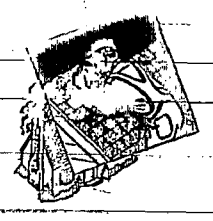

She nodded and released her grip. The impact of her 112 pounds almost caused him to lose his grip. But he held on. The moment she was below him he began pulling upward, hand over hand. In a moment their hands touched and she was safe on the rock.

Tracy's hand reached for hers. There was a queer light in his eyes. "It just came to me," he said, "what this old world would be like without you, Gen. I mean—" he gulped—"I never realized it before. I—Gen, I don't know how to say it."

Her eyes were misty. "Darling, you don't have to. I've been waiting for you to look like that for 10 years."

RED CROSS FIELD DIRECTORS GIVE SERVICEMEN'S PROBLEMS

Red Cross services to the armed forces are available wherever U. S. servicemen are stationed. Here a Red Cross field director goes right to a young sailor at work on his ship for the facts he needs to help solve a problem.

The sailor was young. He had finished his home leave in a southern coastal city and was heading back to his California base.

He said goodby to his parents and to an older brother, a marine veteran just returned from service. Then he left by bus.

A few hours later the older brother was killed in an automobile accident. The family appealed to the Red Cross to locate the younger son so he could return home.

Within a short while a Red Cross chapter secretary along the route intercepted the bus, broke the news, and helped the lad get started back home. There the chapter got in touch with the field director at the west coast base and verified the facts for the commanding officer who was being asked to extend the sailor's leave.

Once or more every minute, around the clock last year, the Red Cross performed some service for members of the military forces and their families. Among the nearly three quarters of a million cases handled, a large percentage involved supplying verified information concerning home conditions requiring emergency leave or extension of leave. While the Red Cross cannot grant leave to a serviceman, military authorities depend upon its post field directors and the network of chapters for reports of conditions underlying such leave requests.

Field directors in 364 military installations and hospitals and 1,059 itinerant- and sub-stations in this country and abroad aid servicemen with personal problems that range from babies and budgets to helping straighten out delays that hold up pay or family allowances.

The serviceman has his family problems, marital difficulties, financial strains, and family illnesses—all disturbing to morale.

Field directors, providing 24-hour service at military installations, are pretty much in the same situation as the family doctor. They are routed out of bed at all hours to face any one of a hundred complicated problems. Sometimes it may be to get a report on the condition of a critically ill member of a soldier's family, or to lend him money for an emergency trip home, or to find housing for a family unexpectedly arriving at the post.

Whatever the problem, the serviceman feels free to turn to the Red Cross for help, knowing that he will find a sympathetic friend in the man wearing the Red Cross uniform.

College Students May Register at Nearest Board

College and university students who become 18 years of age after the school term starts need not return to their homes to register under the Selective Service Law, Michigan State Director Colonel Glenn B. Arnold said today, but may register at the local board most convenient to them, as may others when they reach the age of 18.

"The law requires registration of all young men—with very few exceptions—within five days after their eighteenth birthday," Colonel Arnold said, "but there still seems to be some misunderstanding as to the place of registration. All the young man has to do is present himself to the local board or registration place designated in that particular area most convenient in the place he happens to be when he becomes 18. The registration process is simple and requires only a short time. The data thus gathered is sent to the local board of the community he terms his home and which has jurisdiction over him."

When the registrant has a permanent home, the permanent home address should be given to registration officials. For this purpose "home" is the place with which the registrant normally identifies himself and at which he would wish to be classified.

Colonel Arnold pointed out that there is no liability for service under the Act until the age of 19 is reached, but he emphasized the obligation to register at 18.

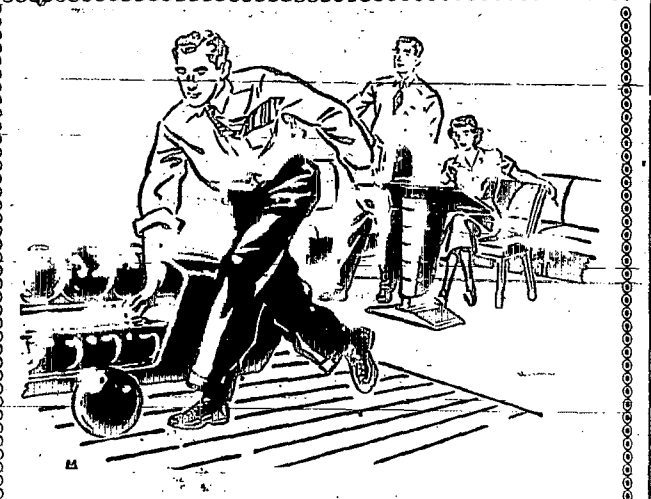

"The law is specific," he said, "and provides sever penalty for failure to comply."

Colonel Arnold added that the law is also specific in its requirements concerning obligation of a registrant to keep his local board informed as to any change in his address—where he may be reached by mail, that is—or change in his status under the Act.

"That applies after the registrant becomes 26 as well as before, and it means that college and university students, as well as other registrants, should notify their respective local boards when they leave their homes. There is no form for this. It may be done by mail or personally appearing at the board office."

Colonel Arnold emphasized that the requirements to register and legal obligations of registrants were in no way altered because there have been no inductions within the past few months.

Place of registration in this county is County Treasurer Office, Court House, Grayling, Mich.

of apples sold. This fund is administered by the Michigan apple commission.

Because of the 1949 bumper crop, which incidentally is of excellent quality, the state department of agriculture has offered to provide $4,000 from the department's special fund to augment the commission's program of promotion.

Minard Fraley, Jr., enterprising secretary of the apple commission, said growers were seeking cooperation of Florida outlets in an effort to obtain an apple haulback for truckers who bring fresh citrus fruit to Michigan.

The Lake Michigan shore is one of the most important fruit belts in the United Staes. Grapes, peaches, apples and pears are concentrated here. Michigan ranges third in number of vines and peach trees and acreage of strawberries; fourth and fifth in number of apple and pear trees.

The hardier fruits, moreover, are widely distributed in the southern portion of the state. Romeo's peach festival is an example.

Michigan agriculture requires the efforts of many persons other than full-time farmers and family workers. In 1948 more than 50,000 seasonal workers were employed at the period of peak demand in August.

Surplus crops present the biggest headache to growers.

Thats why the state of Michigan comes into the picture for inspection, marketing and advertising.

You will have an opportunity to enjoy Michigan apples this fall, winter and spring at attractive prices. As for grapes, the growers apparently patched up their difficulties, and all is well. At least we hope so.

Because more people rely on newspapers for information than on other media, Michigan governors hold press conferences twice a day.

The governor discusses problems of state government with reporters. The daily newspaper, in the matter of hours, carries news on these developments:

Woes of Michigan grape growers were aired recently at a conference called by Governor G. Mennen Williams and covered by the press. Oddly enough, grape growers apparently boycotted the meeting, as none of them showed up. How to dispose of the 1949 grape crop was announced as the theme. Testimony was given to the effect that growers were demanding $100 a ton, whereas the Welch Grape Juice Company, leading processor, was willing to pay $75. Miles Nelson, state department of agriculture, said the 1949 crop was normal, no surplus existed, and the quality was not up to par. He also told this writer that California grape growers were getting $25 a ton.

Clarence Bolander, information chief of the agriculture department, said that 26 per cent of Michigan's grape crop was usually sold as fresh fruit; 6 per cent was purchased by housewifes for jelly and jam; and the remainder was sold to processors for grape juice or wine.

A Detroit produce man reported the modern housewife shuns the chore of making jelly, preferring to purchase ready-made products from the corner grocer. He said the new generation apparently had new ideas, and that applied to Detroit's Italian section, too.

As the grape conference went, round and round, getting nowhere fast, testimony quickly focused attention on the general problem of marketing Michigan's food crops. It was revealed that Michigans 1949 apple yield was 11 million bushels, as compared to 4 million bushels last year and a 10-year average of 6 million bushels.

Whereas the grape growers were apparently disinterested in state intervention, Michigan apple growers are very much interested. And yet the solution is not easy. For example, it was pointed out that many apple growers prefer to sell apples in bulk, not in smaller packages as preferred by many retailers and housewives.

Under state agricultural advertising law, any group of growers can qualify for limited state aid if they raise their own funds on a matching basis. Apple growers have done this for years. Furthermore, they raise a substantial sum of money annually by a 1-cent contribution ton each bushel
